Bad traffic between this city and Montpelier is exceedingly difficult now because of mud holes at frequent intervals. Yesterday a loaded stone team got mired to the hubs in a hole near Jones Bros. company's plant. Further attempts to drive his horse through one of these holes, at first the animal pulled his feet out with difficulty and finally the resistance of the mud became so strong that the beast got completely entangled and gave up, slipping softly to its side. After considerable trouble the peddler got the horse to its feet and finally got out of the slough.
